Build on Solid Foundation

Greg Canfield
Secretary, Alabama Department of Commerce

Alabama's economic development team recorded another strong year in 2016, successfully working more than 400 projects across diverse industries even as a contentious presidential election caused many companies to hit the pause button on their investment and expansion plans.

The team's hard work paid off, and the numbers in the 2016 New & Expanding Industry Report prove it. These projects will bring 14,707 new jobs to Alabama, along with just under $4.2 billion in capital investment. Better still, these results strengthen the foundation for our strategic efforts to expand Alabama's economy and prepare it for a technologically advanced future. Since 2012, the work of Alabama's economic development team has resulted in $24.5 billion in capital investment and almost 90,000 jobs for the state.

As shown in this report, the range of projects during 2016 was sweeping and multi-faceted. Not surprisingly, Alabama's auto and aerospace industries will continue to grow because of the high level of new investment announced last year. But other sectors of the economy also showed robust activity. The forest products industry, in particular, turned in a strong performance, with companies announcing Alabama projects involving more than $750 million in investment. Across all sectors, many of the new jobs are tech-focused, requiring advanced skills.

Other important developments that occurred in 2016 are not reflected in this report but stemmed directly from work carried out in prior years. Airbus, for instance, delivered its first Alabama-made passenger jet to customer Jet Blue, four years after announcing plans for a Mobile assembly line.

Polaris, recruited to Alabama in 2015, launched production at its new Huntsville ATV manufacturing facility. And companies with a longtime presence in Alabama such as Boeing and Evonik made substantial investments to expand their operations in the state.

In addition, we updated our strategic economic development growth plan, Accelerate Alabama last year. We also refreshed the "Made in Alabama" brand that we launched back in 2013 to advance our economic development efforts. Last year also brought progress in our push to make Alabama's workforce development program the gold standard in the nation. We're excited about the new AlabamaWorks system because it will seamlessly link employers with skilled workers across the state, giving us another advantage.

I look forward with optimism to the rest of 2017. We're already off to a good start, with several major economic announcements already in the books and a full pipeline of promising projects. Significantly, I'm also encouraged by the support of Alabama's new governor, Kay Ivey, who firmly believes that economic development can help shape the future of the state by creating opportunities for our citizens.

Thank you,
